SEX BAROCLINIC 3: back in the habit 2 BATHROOM OF THE WEEK

We all know there are more than two genders, but there are only two all-gender bathrooms among the UW Oceanography buildings. For our non-binary department members, or those just seeking a nice private place to go, you're pretty much stuck with the 3rd floor of MSB or 2nd floor OSB. This may lead you to ask: are gendered bathrooms stupid in the first place? The short answer - Yes! The long answer yes, yes, yes! Women on the 2nd floor of MSB are expected to walk up/down an entire flight of stairs just to use a bathroom. Do you know how dangerous this is if someone has diarrhea? Plus I've been in the "women's" bathroom and I have news to share -the toilets work exactly the same. In summary, we suggest everyone he queer, do crime, and use whatever bathroof they want to.

"9/18/19. Oxygen probe data reveals that a black bucket discreetly hanging off the side of the MSB dock was opened at 1 am. Please report all information on possible human, raccoon, crow, or salmon suspects to the Touch Tank."

"2017, R/V Marcus G. Langseth: Rumors travel fast on ships. Word spread that a marine tech had been keeping a dog in his state room, corroborated by the occasional bark. Once the captain caught wind of this canine conspiracy, he issued a proclamation: "It has come to my attention that there is a dog onboard. At no time may any crew harbor pets in their state rooms." The tech denied these allegations, and from then on it was all hush puppies."

"Notes from this summer: 1) Snails have teeth. 2) Snail dentistry is a respectable profession. After collecting over 500 marine snails and dissecting them to extract, image and count thousands of their teeny teeth, I think it's safe to call myself a dental professional."

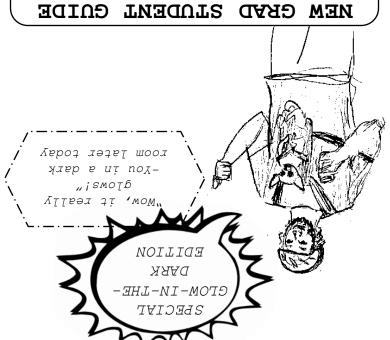

"I was on a beach in Australia and a kangaroo showed up. He tried to grab some fruit off a nearby tree branch, but his arms were too short. After a few failed attempts, he hopped away in shame."

"2019, R/V Kilo Moana: In order to understand day-night oscillations of biochemical processes in the North Pacific, it is necessary that we sacrifice our own. For a multi-day diel sampling window, we smash our own bodily clocks. Exhausted and babbling, our shattered primate minds gaze into the ancient rhythms of the sea."

CENTURY RIDE

"What is vorticity?" This burning question drove me to assemble a team of compatriots on a crisp autumn afternoon to eddy for a 6.5-hour, 100-mile bicycle relay around Green Lake. Green Lake is a highly eccentric ellipse of water 2.81 mi around (equivalent to 4.52 km in metric or 2π rad in polar coordinates) with a paved path scenically following the waterline. Dripping with sweat and beer, we were able to maintain a Rossby number > 100 for the entirety of the ride.

This means that quasi-geostrophic dynamics would do quite a poor job describing the evolution of our relative vorticity. Such athleticism requires consideration of higher

This Century Ride was one for the textbooks. We got to hang out with the best Green Lake has to offer: a roller-skating juggler, some bats, and a rat. Hopefully, the Century Ride will live on as an annual event.
